

Explore & Learn

Storyboarding

Take a closer look at some of the unusual objects from our collection to inspire some of your own storytelling – use the storyboard template to illustrate and caption some scenes from your imagination...

These are moccasins, which are a traditional form of Native American footwear. In the woodlands of the East, where these come from, moccasins had soft soles to allow the wearer to move quietly through the forests.

Can you think of a reason why your character might need to sneak through a woodland wearing these?

This is the skeleton of a dachshund dog called 'Pterodactyl', who was one of the most successful prize-winning show dogs in England.

Have a go at coming up with the story of how he got such an unusual name!

Photo Credit: Tony Salt & David Edge

This is a shadow puppet from Asia, and is known as a kasar – this is a bad character who might be dishonest, greedy and cruel.

Could this puppet be the villain of your story?

This is a Sun Bear, which come from the tropical forests of South East Asia. They are also known as 'honey bears' because they like it so much.

Why not use this fact as the starting point for your own story?

Explore & Learn

Storyboarding

1.	2.	3.
4.		7.
5.	6.	